Everything In Rubber But Tires

Gorillas, oSo-Soft Air Cushions, Radiator Hose, Beach Balls, Revolvers, Swords, Ducks, Kangaroos, Skin-like Bathing Suits—These and a Thousand Other Articles Are Made of Rubber by the Eno Rubber Corporation in Its Torrance Factory

Plantations in Singapore, the Malay Straits, Sumatra, Borneo, along the Amazon in South America, and elsewhere throughout the tropics, contribute a necessity to one of Torrance's principal industries. That necessity is rubber, and the corporation so dependent on this source of supply is the Eno Rubber Corporation, Torrance manufacturer of a thousand and one commodities in daily household, office and commercial use.

Only this week one hundred and fifty cases of raw rubber were received in Torrance from the Malay Straits, and is even now in the process of being converted into shapes and forms so that it may be utilized commercially.

This rubber, which but a few brief months ago ran as sap from a plantation tree in the tropics, may shortly adorn the features of a Lon Chaney; it may be in the form of oil well supplies now in the California beaches. The Eno concern also has a daily output of 600 rubber pneumatic cushions for office chairs and seats.

The Eno Corporation normally employs from 45 to 50 persons at the Torrance plant, and they are now working 24 hours daily. The corporation maintains Los Angeles offices at 110-112-114 East 17th street, and its factory at Torrance under the supervision of William S. Shawger, who has been identified with the Eno Rubber concern for the past sixteen years.

Roy E. Musser is president and general manager. He is a member of the Torrance Rotary Club, and like Mr. Shawger takes a keen interest in civic affairs.

In addition to their office and factory organization, they have two principal retail outlets, one of which is the Western Auto Supply. Products of the Corporation, principally the oSo-Soft air cushions and the oSo-Sure non skid bath mats, are sold in stores of this company in principally all western cities.

Inspection Trips Although the Eno Corporation is one of Torrance's newer industries, it is one of its most interesting. According to Mr. Shawger, residents of Torrance may inspect the plant any Saturday afternoon.

For the Movies Included in the motion picture specialties are rubber, revolvers, spears, swords, chains, etc. The deformed back which Lon Chaney used in his famous characterization of the Hunchback of Notre Dame was made at the Torrance factory, the factory working day and night to complete the item in order not to hold up the filming of the picture.

Gorilla Suits A few brief years ago the Eno concern made two complete gorilla suits of rubber. They were worn by men in a movie thriller featuring the activities of a gorilla, and present employees at the plant will testify that the resemblance was so good it was next to impossible to tell that the man wearing the rubber outfit was not, in fact, a real gorilla.

Frequently the factory is called upon to make thin rubber suits which are worn next to the skin by movie stars who are taking part in shipwreck or other pictures which require that they be exposed to the elements. Thus, while the camera will record that they are "wringing wet" they are really comfortably dry.

Mechanical Products In the mechanical line the factory manufactures moulded mechanical goods and oil well supplies, including pistons, valve inserts, casing protectors, and packer rubbers. They manufacture tubing for the Ford Motor and Willys-Overland Motor Company, and windshield strips, channel rubber, running board mats, pedal pads, conveyor belts, etc., for general commercial use.

Hy-Balls One of the most popular items manufactured locally is the Hy-Ball which is a vapor-colored beach ball now so commonly used along

WILLARD TO BUILD NEW L. A. PLANT

Announcement Sent to Harvel's, Torrance Battery Distributor for Harbor District.

A million dollar plant to be built in Los Angeles as an addition to their already gigantic organization is the announcement made public today by the Willard Storage Battery Company of Cleveland, Ohio, through its president, R. C. Norberg.

The new plant, which is to be the third separate unit of this company, is being built expressly for the purpose of supplying the ever-increasing demand for the Willard product on the west coast.

Along with this will come the decidedly advantageous factors of improved service and a minimizing of freight charges due to the plant's location in the heart of the west coast battery buying field.

The production output will be such that a fresh stock can be kept on the local dealers shelves at all times. This new plant also gives the Willard organization the opportunity to tie up with local demands and conditions and gives them the added advantage of finding new ways of serving their customers with their internationally famous "Quality Built In" product.

The new structure is to conform to regular battery manufacturing practice in that it is to be one story in height, of brick construction and will have a daily capacity of at least two thousands batteries.

Further announcements of Willard activities on the west coast—which they claim will revolutionize the battery situation in that part of the country—are expected shortly, according to Harvel's, distributor for Willards in the southern district.

CORRECTION It was stated in last week's issue that Dan Connors, under arrest on a charge of forcible entry in connection with the West Garage in Lomita, was out on parole from San Quentin. Relatives of the youth state that he has never been in San Quentin, but that he is on probation from a Los Angeles court.
